H Street has returned to its roots as a thriving, commercial hub, and is home to a diverse, cohesive community. A revitalized visual and performing arts scene, hipster bars, music venues, and a boom of high-end condos and apartments are quickly reshaping the historic corridor, bringing new opportunities for residents, consumers and business owners.

Whether it's pho, falafel, or fried fish; bluegrass, jazz, or rock, H Street's scene offers something for everyone. The one-and-a-half mile commercial corridor boasts coffee shops, a farmer's market, more than 100 retail stores, and a collection of international cuisines, including Italian, Ethiopian, Middle Eastern, Vietnamese, Japanese, Jamaican, British, Belgian and Southern, among many others.

There are performances to see and even participate in every night at H Street's many venues, including the Atlas Performing Arts Center, a restored Art Deco landmark theater, H Street Playhouse, Red Palace, the Rock and Roll Hotel, and Twelve Restaurant and Lounge. Dance to free bluegrass at SOVA Espresso and Wine; join or watch an open jam session at HR-57 Center for the Preservation of Jazz and Blues, or sing karaoke at Sticky Rice.

Union Station anchors the western end of H Street and provides local, regional and interstate access via Metrorail, Metrobus, Circulator, Amtrack, VRE, MARC, Megabus, BoltBus, Capital Bikeshare and in 2013, the H Street streetcar line.
